The MacCallums of Kilmartin & The MacCallums of Glen Lyon Attempt to Meet Up With Each Other

" The Pass of Brander and The Clan of Sixty Fools"

Also see The Colgin Story

Many years later, after the second son had settled in Glen Lyon and the third son had settled in Kilmartin, the two MacCallum families had grown in number. Thirty of the Glen Lyon MacCallums set out to meet the Kilmartin family - perhaps for a wedding. A similar number of Kilmartin MacCallums set out to meet them. They met at a narrow Pass of Brander, and failing to recognize each other, each demanded the right to cross first. Each side was too proud to give way, so they set to and fought over it, until there remained only one man on each side. The two men sat down to rest and got to talking before resuming the fight; only then did each discover who the other was, and from that day on they were known as the clan of the sixty fools.
